Patricia Loconto and Sandra Makin - Edit

Dedication

To you - Mr. Joseph R. Burgess, often affectionately called a "Prince Among Men," --- we, the Senior Class of 1958, do pay tribute to your long period of service as superintendent (1937-58) -- during which time you have never lost sight of the highest possible educational goals for all Charlton pupils--by dedicating this, our yearbook. As youth must be inspired by high ideals, we will strive to emulate your many sterling qualities: ability to govern with dignity, professional ethics, and integrity; and to live a full, well-rounded life, characterized by spontaneous wit, kindness, and a sense of fairness in your every act.

Class History

The day had arrived!! We were finally in high school. Forty-four timid freshmen were trying to locate their home rooms and find the old familiar faces. We were separated into two home rooms, one under the direction of Mr. Kane and the other under the supervision of Miss Lantelme. Later in the year we were sorry to lose both Miss Lantelme and Mr. Kane. As substitutes we had Mr. Boudreau and Mr. Ball. We then gained two new advisors, namely, Mr. Chasse and Mr. Pecukonis. But, Uncle Sam summoned Mr. Pecukonis, and we welcomed still another Mr. Pizziferi.

Class officers for the year were: Elton Galloway, President; Allen Reid, Vice-President; Ann Tavernier, Secretary; and Patricia Loconte, Treasurer.

Among all the work and play, we were sorry to lose Maro Phillips, Joseph Ellis, Doris Snow, Elaine Hale and Arsene Labonte, but, we were glad to welcome into our group, Ann Tavernier and Rhoda Berg.

Those on the honor roll for the year included Robert Andrews, Rhoda Berg, Lila Bond, Jeanne Carpentier, Patricia Loconte, Sandra Makin, Allen Reid, David Schiller, and Madeline Tiberii.

An outstanding event of the year was our Freshman Hop, which gave us a good profit for our treasury.

Gathering all these things together as past memories, we journeyed on.

We entered our second year of Charlton High School as a class of forty-six. We were still divided into two rooms, with Mrs. Bancroft and Mr. Chasse as our advisors. The officers for the year were President, Rhoda Berg; Vice-President, Elton Galloway; Secretary, Madeline Tiberii; and Treasurer, Sandra Makin.

We were happy to gain two new members as the year progressed. They were Mary O'Grady and Richard Joseph. But, as time marched on we also lost a few members, namely, Thelma Burlingame, Arthur St. Laurent, Elton Gallaway, Arlene Kelley, John Mongeon, Bette Wilson, Roland Leduc, Justin Putnam, Janice Carpenter, Victor Racine, and Daryle Tower.

When Elton Gallaway left us, we proceeded to elect a new Vice-President, Dennis Casey.

Our one big activity of the year was to be our Sophomore Hop which was cancelled because of the bad snow storm.

Those who made the honor roll were these: high honors, Allen Reid; honors - Rhoda Berg, Lila Bond, Jeanne Carpentier, Ann Tavernier, Patricia Loconte and David Schiller.

We left our sophomore year eagerly looking forward to becoming upperclassmen.

Welcoming back Mr. Kane as our home room teacher, we entered our Junior year, Mrs. Bancroft also assisted as our class advisor.

We began our third year at Charlton High with forty-three pupils and the following officers: President Elton Gallaway; Vice-President, Dennis Casey; Secretary, Madeline Tiberii; and Treasurer, Jeanne Carpentier.

As a class we immediately started fund raising projects for our Washington trip. These included candy sales, paper drives, and dances. Later on in the year we regretfully lost Mary Drake, Mary Shea, Eleanor Burnette, Mary Caplette, Joyce White, Carolyn Whitcomb, Sandra Snow, Edward Germain, Rose Nedzweckas, Joseph Prunier, Richard Joseph, Eugene Mongeon, and Alice Casey. We also gained four new members - Carol Duplessis, George Griggs, Alan Reiser and Elton Gallaway.

Honor roll students for the year were Allen Reid, Patricia Loconte, Sandra Makin, David Schiller, Ann Tavernier, and Susan Versey.

We had a very successful Junior Prom, with Russ Cole and his orchestra providing music for the evening.

At last the end of the term came, and we each went our separate ways hoping to meet again as Seniors.

Well, here we were Seniors at last. It was hard to believe that most of us finally made it, for our class had dwindled to a mere thirty-two by the beginning of our Senior year, and soon, with the loss of Lois Allen, became thirty-one. This year we were under the direction of another new teacher, Miss Dunham; but we also kept Mrs. Bancroft as our class advisor.

The officers for the year were President, Elton Galloway; Vice-President, David Schiller; Secretary Patricia Loconte; and Treasurer, Elizabeth Stearns.

Those on the honor roll were Lila Bond, Jeanne Carpentier, Patricia Loconte, Sandra Makin, Joan Manning, Mary O'Grady, Allen Reid, David Schiller, and Susan Vesey.

Since this was our last year, we had to work to make money for our trip to Washington, which came in February. In the fall we held an auction, a Senior Hop, sold cards and gifts, and put on a supper. In March we presented our Senior Play, The Man Who Came To Dinner, which starred Allen Reid, supported by the entire Senior Class.

We the class of 1958, as we go forth into the problems of life, will treasure the memory of our care-free years' work and fun at Charlton High School. In conclusion we wish to thank all administrators and faculty members for the help and inspiration they have given us.

Rhoda Berg and Lila Bond

The Prophecy

It has been almost twenty years since I, Mary O'Grady, left Charlton, Massachusetts. It was June, 1978. I wondered about my old classmates-- where they were-- what they had done-- whom they had married?

I discovered that Charlton now had a large international airport, which was my destination. We landed; and as I disembarked from the plane, I ran into a flood of newspaper reporters -- all of them from the Charlton City Local. One face looked very familiar. "Oh, no," I thought, "It couldn't be" --- but it was --- Elton Galloway, ace reporter, on the Local and also a world-renowned theatre critic. We shook hands; and then I asked, "Why all the reporters?" Elton told me that on the plane, just landed, was one of the best known contemporary dress-designers. As I turned to look, a sleek figure, clad in white brocade, appeared in the doorway. It was Sandra Makin! We pushed our way through the myriads of flashbulbs to the foot of the platform, where we literally kidnapped Sandy. When the rejected reporters had left, we sat in the terminal and, over a cup of coffee, chatted gaily. Sandy told us about her career and travels, as she had just flown in from France and was on her way to Hollywood to fulfill a designing contract for a new motion picture. Elton suggested that the three of us look around.

The first stop on the agenda was the new C.H.S. When we arrived there, we were amazed at the size of our old Alma Mater. Through the front doors and at the end of a mile long corridor was the principal's office. As the door opened, we saw the principal was none other than Dale Favreau, and his assistant principals were Jeanne Carpentier and Barbara Prunier. Barbara was also his wife. We walked through the halls and met three more old friends, Rita Mondor, the eighth grade guidance teacher; Patricia Loconto, (Now Mrs. David Stevens) a Senior home room advisor and Alex Lojko, who had returned to C.H.S. for a P.G. in Agriculture.

As we were leaving, a smart black Cadillac drove up and poured forth a set of quintuplets. Having an avid curiosity, I looked to see who these children were. There were four blondes and one brunette all belonging to Carol Duplessis, for she and Al had married in 1959 and were now operating an Edith Arden Branch beauty salon, the largest in the Metropolis of Charlton. She mentioned that in her employ were Rhoda Berg Cummings, the famous hair stylist; and George Griggs, the celebrated "Monsieur de Locke."

As we drove down Main Street (the old route #20) we saw just outside city hall the Marine Honor Guard preparing to receive American Ambassador to India. Among the guard, was David Russell, who told us that he had made the Marine Corps his career. The Mayor, it seemed, was our own Dennis Casey; and the ambassador was no other than Dennis Sullivan. They spared us ten minutes of their valuable time and informed us that they were going to Washington, D.C. to meet with the ambassador to East Pakistan, namely, Alan Reiser.

We continued on our way toward the industrial center, for a tour of the newly founded Playtex-Girdle Factory, owned and operated by Allen Reid. Allen told us that the photography business had completely collapsed, but that the science of plastic girdle making had interested him greatly. As we chatted in his mahogany furnished office, the door burst open and in rushed the company's chief designer, Richard Moffatt. Richard had designed a completely new four way stretch. Allen's personal secretary and wife was none other than Susan Vesey.

Around the corner from Allen's establishment was the Made-well Textile Plant, whose owners were Gloria Piche and Ann Tavernier. They told us that the multimillionaire, Robert Andrews, had donated fourteen million dollars toward the start of their company.

Leaving the textile plant, we hailed a taxi and asked the driver to take us to the meat packing plants. I caught a glimpse of the driver in the mirror and recognized David Schiller. We found out that the owner of the Safety Cab Company was Lila Bond.

At the meat packing plant, we met the president, who was our own Elizabeth Stearns. Her Vice-President was Connie Putnam. They told us that their biggest supplier was Joan Manning of the Big "T" Ranch in South Dakota.

By this time, it was six p.m. and time for Sandy and me to catch our plane to Hollywood. We waved good-bye to Elton; and as we climbed the stairs, we were greeted by the pilot, Paul Warren, co-pilot, Charles Ellis, and technical engineer, Gurdon Chaffee. Walking to my seat, I noticed a nun in a gray habit. When she smiled, I recognized her to be Madeline Tiberii. She was on her way to a Catholic mission in Cambodia.

As I sat back and watched the run-way disappear beneath me, I thought how fortunate it was that I should meet all of the class of 1958 on the same day.

We are the Seniors; the class of '58,
Our Happy twelve years have come to an end.

It is time to leave our teachers,
classmates, and friends

We also leave the Juniors to guide and show the rest;

We know that they will always try to do their best.

We hope that our departure will bring,
A future bright with happiness and Good Tidings.

And now the time has come for us to bid Adieu,
And say to each and everyone, "GOD
BLESS ALL OF YOU!!
